The Cause:

The migrant education program serves a large population of Burmese migrant workers along the North Andaman Coast who come with the hope of finding a living wage and a better way of life. Burmese children often find themselves living as second class citizens without the money to afford basic fees for enrollment, uniforms, and transportation to and from school. Their parents are often not able to help their children who have no legal access to the Thai education system. The unfortunate result is that many of them work with their parents as child laborers.

How we help:

Our migrant education program offers a learning center that is equipped to provide education for 60 Burmese migrant children living in the Kuraburi district of Phang Nga Province. Here students receive education from dedicated teachers and visiting volunteers which provides them with hope for a better future. We are changing parents' perspectives regarding their children's education by proving that furthering their education makes a difference. By facilitating their integration into secondary Burmese and Thai school systems, we will provide them with better job opportunities in the future.

What you can do:

Help us to provide an alternative to these hard working people and their children. Any amount can help to cover these monthly essential costs of maintaining the center:

- $15 transports one student
- $20 buys a student lunch
- $85 pays the utilities
- $350 pays a teacher salary
- $200 pays for one year tuition
